واستيقظ ملايين البريطانيين صباح الأحد على فضيحة من العيار الثقيل من المحتمل أن تشعل أزمة دبلوماسية بين لندن وتل أبيب خلال الأيام القليلة المقبلة، وذلك بعد أن تبين بأن مسؤولاً كبيراً في السفارة الإسرائيلية يتآمر مع "عميلة" له من كبار الموظفين في الحكومة البريطانية من أجل تدمير فضيحة أو مصيبة تُطيح بوزير في حكومة حزب المحافظين ببريطانيا، وذلك عقاباً لهذا الوزير على موقفه الرافض للاستيطان الاسرائيلي في الأراضي الفلسطينية، وهي الفضيحة التي تصدرت

الصفحات الأولى للصحف في يوم العطلة الأسبوعية، وشغلت أيضا مئات المواقع الالكترونية الاخبارية في بريطانيا والولايات المتحدة واسرائيل ومختلف أنحاء العالم.

وجاءت تفاصيل الفضيحة عبر تسجيل فيديو مدته ثلاث دقائق ونصف تمكنت قناة الجزيرة من تصويره أو تكليف من يقوم بتصويره سراً، ووصل الى وسائل الاعلام البريطانية صباح الأحد، وسرعان ما تسبب باستقالة الموظفة في الحكومة البريطانية من منصبها، فيما لا يُمثل هذا الفيديو سوى ثلاث دقائق ونصف فقط من أصل فلم وثائقي مدته 120 دقيقة قامت وحدة التحقيقات في قناة الجزيرة بانتاجه ومن المقرر أن تبثه على مشاهديها الأسبوع المقبل، لتكشف به مزيداً من تفاصيل الفضيحة التي قد تتحول الى منعطف خطير في العلاقات البريطانية الاسرائيلية.

واستعرضت “عربي21” صباح الأحد قائمة طويلة من كبرى الصحف الأجنبية والمواقع الالكترونية العالمية لتجد أن خبر الفضيحة الاسرائيلية التي كشفتها قناة الجزيرة الانجليزية يتصدر أغلب الصفحات الأولى والمواقع، بما في ذلك الصحف والمواقع اليمينية المحسوبة المتعاطفة مع اسرائيل، فضلاً عن أن كافة المواقع الصحافية الاسرائيلية اضطرت لنشر الفضيحة مع فيديو الجزيرة ذاته بعد أن تحول الى الخبر الأول في صحف بريطانيا، وبعد أن أصبحت العلاقات الدبلوماسية بين لندن وتل أبيب مهددة بالتوتر.

Israeli envoy in plot to 'take down MPs'

by Ian Cobain and Ewen MacAskill

An Israeli embassy official has been caught on camera in an undercover sting plotting to "take down" MPs regarded as hostile, including foreign office minister Sir Alan Duncan, an outspoken supporter of a Palestinian state.

In an extraordinary breach of diplomatic protocol, Shai Masot, who describes himself as an officer in the Israel Defence Forces and is serving as a senior political officer at the London embassy, was recorded by an undercover reporter from al-Jazeera's investigative unit speaking about a number of British MPs.

The Israeli ambassador, Mark Regev, apologised to Duncan on Friday. An Israeli spokesman said Regev made clear that "the embassy considered the remarks completely unacceptable".

Although the embassy declined to comment on internal disciplinary matters, it is understood Masot has been reprimanded. Masot declined to comment, or elaborate about what he meant when he said he wanted to "take down"

وخصصت جريدة “ميل أون صندي” صفحتها الأولى بالكامل للفضيحة دون أن تضع معها أي خبر آخر، وعنونت تقول: “مؤامرة اسرائيلية لإسقاط وزير من حزب المحافظين”، فيما تجدر الإشارة الى أن “ميل أون صندي” هي الصحيفة الأوسع انتشاراً والأكثر توزيعاً في بريطانيا من بين نظيراتها من صحف آخر الأسبوع.

In the upper reaches of the Conservative party, politicians such as foreign office minister Sir Alan Duncan and Crispin Blunt are a rarity: they are prepared to be vocal in support of the Palestinian cause. This, it seems, is why a senior political officer at the Israeli embassy talked about his desire to "take down" Duncan and agreed Blunt was on some sort of "hitlist".

While the Israeli ambassador, Mark Regev, has now apologised to Duncan for the comments made by embassy official Shai Masot, they came to light only because of an undercover operation by al-Jazeera.

Masot made the comments at a London restaurant in a conversation with Maria Strizzolo, a civil servant who previously worked as a Conservative party aide. Also present was a man they knew as "Robin", and whom they believed to be working for Labour Friends of Israel. In fact, "Robin" was an undercover reporter. Although the embassy insists Masot was a junior official and not a diplomat, his business card describes him as "a senior political officer" while his LinkedIn page lists him as having worked for the embassy since November 2014.

He describes his work as being the chief point of contact between the embassy and MPs, and liaising with ministers and officials at the Foreign Office. He also describes himself as having been a major in the Israel Defence Forces (IDF) between 2004 and 2011 and as being still employed by the IDF as deputy head of the international organisations sector.

The comments about Duncan came during a conversation that began about something else. At the restaurant, during a meeting in late October, Strizzolo claimed she had helped to secure a promotion for her boss, Conservative MP Robert Halfon. She had been his chief of staff when he was deputy chairman of the Conservative party. Last year Halfon was appointed education minister and Strizzolo was appointed to a position as a senior manager at the Skills Funding Agency. She continues to work part-time for Halfon.

In the footage, Masot agreed that she had assisted Halfon and then asked whether she could also achieve the opposite effect. "Can I give you some MPs that I would suggest you can take down?" he said. He went on to say she knew which MPs he was referring to. She asked him to remind her. "The deputy foreign minister," Masot said. She said: "You still want to go for it?" Masot's reply is ambiguous but he said Duncan was still causing problems. "I thought we had, you know, neutralised him just a little bit, no?" she said. "No," he said.

Masot does not elaborate on what he meant by "take down" but it is normally used as meaning to engineer a downfall, possibly through discrediting a person.

The conversation turned to foreign secretary Boris Johnson. Strizzolo said he was solid on Israel. Masot agreed, adding that Johnson just did not care. "You know he is an idiot," Masot said.

Strizzolo returned to Duncan later in the conversation, suggesting that he had had a run-in with Halfon in the past and that Halfon had reported Duncan to the whips. So never say never, she added. Masot replied: "Never say never, yeah, but..." Strizzolo: "A little scandal, maybe."

In another conversation, about historical antisemitism in the Conservative party, Masot agreed that Blunt was among MPs that are "strongly pro-Arab rather than pro-Israel". Strizzolo refers to him being on a "hitlist".

Duncan has found himself in trouble with the Board of Deputies of British Jews and the Israeli embassy. Both the Board of Deputies and the embassy protested in 2011 after Duncan, on a visit to the West Bank as international development minister, accused Israel in a video of a "land grab" of Palestinian territory.

He was in the middle of another dispute in 2014 after a speech at the London's Royal United Services Institute describing illegal Israeli settlements on the West Bank as a "wicked cocktail" and criticising the scale of pro-Israeli lobbying. Masot, in one of the recorded conversations refers to Duncan as an Arabist with a background in oil and gas who is "totally into Gulf states".

Blunt, who is joint chairman of the Palestine all-party parliamentary group, took issue with Theresa May a week ago for her criticism of the American secretary of state, John Kerry.

Blunt, lining up with Kerry, positioning herself closer to president-elect Donald Trump, who is seen pro-Israel.

a number of MPs. The embassy later said Masot "will be ending his term of employment with the embassy shortly".

Masot had been speaking to Maria Strizzolo, a civil servant and formerly an aide to another Conservative minister. Strizzolo, discussing with Masot how to discredit MPs, said: "Well, you know, if you look hard enough, I'm sure that there is something that they're trying to hide." Later she added: "A little scandal, maybe." Masot was filmed at the Aubaine restaurant near the embassy in London in October.

Other prominent Conservatives named included Crispin Blunt, chairman of the Commons foreign affairs select committee, who is also a vocal supporter of the Palestinians. Blunt said last night: "While this apparent activity of a diplomat of a foreign state in the politics of the United Kingdom is outrageous and deserving of investigation, the real questions should be for Israel itself. Israel's future should be for Israel itself. Israel's future peace and security is not being served by ignoring the worldwide Jewish community and working to undermine those foreign politicians who share that perspective." Duncan declined to comment. UK ministers as a matter of course at a sensitive moment, just over a week after Theresa May put herself at odds with the Obama administration by voicing strong support for Israel in a dispute over West Bank settlements.

The sting operation, which began in June and ran to November, began conversations on a number of occasions that included pro-Israeli activists as well as British politicians and Israeli embassy staff. The recordings form the basis of four documentaries that al-Jazeera is to broadcast from 15 January.

Strizzolo said: "The implications [the Observer] is seeking to draw from a few out-of-context snippets of a conversation, obtained by subterfuge, over a social dinner was light, tongue-in-cheek and gossipy. Any suggestion that I, as a civil servant working in education, could ever exert the type of influence you are suggesting is risible."

"Shai Masot is someone I know. He is purely socially and as a friend. He is not someone with whom I have ever worked or had any political dealings beyond chatting about politics."

A Foreign Office spokesman said: "The Israeli embassy has apologised and it is clear the views of the embassy do not reflect the views of Israel. The UK has a strong relationship with Israel and we consider the matter closed."
